COL. W. A. PHILLIPS

NUMBER 17

EDITOR SALINA JOURNAL:- I de most exceedingly regret the announce ment in your last issue, of the withdrawal of Col. Phillips' name, as a candidate for Congress either from the First District, or at large. And I tell you sir, with a full heart, that you are taking from us the man whom we, the people, had set our hearts upon as our next representative in Congress. And if ever there was a sad mistake made by any people, it was when Col Phillips was allowed to be cruelly set aside to make place for Mr. Anderson in the interests of corporation and political factions, and against the interest of the people of this district and of the state, in not being properly represented in our National Legislative halls. It was a proud day for Kansas, when Col. Phillips represented her in Congress. His name was familiar to my ears, long before I thought of a Kansas home, and, in fact, when I came here, appeared to know more of him than many in the state he represented to push things. The grading and bridge work are nearly completed, and force enough will be put on to lay from a mile and a half to two miles per day.

They cannot push the work too rapidly to suit the people along the line, so long as they do it well.

The road will pay as soon as it is finished to Topeka, and regular trains are running. There will be no diffithe state, in not being properly repreented. I know that in the Eastern states, Col Phillips was looked upon as among our ablest men in Congress, and if the people had looked more closely to their own individual interests, and not allow themselves to be swindled by a set of political brokers and hucksters, Col. Phillips would be their representative to day, to the glory of Kansas and her people's good. Col. Phillips don't need to come and make a personal canvass, we will attend to that for him, and if cunning men of means, in the back-ground of our conventions, continue to overshadow and thwart the wishes of the people in their choice, as to who shall be their candidate, we will take the matter in our own hands, and see it whether or not we are compelled to furnish votes to elect men in the interests of the few and against the wishes and interests of the many just because certain political nabobs choose to say, thus, and so it shall be I tell you the Republican party is one of long forbearance, but it is ceasing to be a virtue, and the great herd is beginning to snuff the air. I am apprehensive of a stampede, and, if we get started, it will take a swifter set of political cow-boys than our present congressional herders, to round us up again. There is an undercurrent of feeling among the voters of this district that perhaps those who devote their time only to the art of manipulating political conventions, don't study or understand, or at least for which they appear to have no regard. ing Col. In company with Superintendent Johnston, Judge Safford, and a number of our citizens, we took our first ride on the Leavenworth, Topeka & Southwestern Railroad last Monday. We expected to find it somewhat rickety and rocky, like about all the new roads we have passed over, but were agreeably surprised to find it solid, well constructed throughout, and as level and smooth running as most of the old roads. It is decidedly the best new road we have been on; and our experience extends over a large number of western roads, including the Kansas Pacific and Atchison Topeka & Santa Fe. We were highly gratified with the manner in which the road has been constructed. It is heavy work nearly all the way, being a constant succession of cuts and fills and has been rather expensive to make; but it is on high

HORACE GREELEY'S SHOES About the year 1870, when Arthur Barret was President of the Fair Association, Mr. Greeley accepted an invitation to deliver the annual address in the amphitheatre at the Fair Grounds Col. Todd was chairman of the recep-tion committee, and after the close of the address, escorted the speaker to his room at the Southern Hotel, where he bade him good-bye, as Mr. Greeley was to leave the city early on the following morning. Before leaving him, however, Col. Todd said: Well, Mr. Greeley, I trust that during your stay here everything has been done for your comfort, and that every thing has been satisfactory to

"Yes," replied Mr. Greeley, slowly, and with considerable hesitancy, "everything has been as pleasant as I could have desired, except—"here the old gentleman looked sadly down at his feet, and after a brief pause re sumed, "except that some one stole my shoes, tast night."
"Stole your shoes!" echoed Col.
Todd, in astonishment, also surveying

Mr. Greeley's feet.
"Yes," replied Mr. Greeley with a sigh, and moving his feet uncomfortably. "Yes, I left them outside my door last night, and some one walked off with them. But a new pair was left in place of the old ones, and that's asy and comfortable, but the new ones hurt my feet."

"One might be pardoned," said
Col. Todd, "for wanting to step into your shoes. Perhaps some one want-your shoes. Perhaps some one wanted them as souvenirs."

This was intended for a compliment but Mr. Greeley was too much interested in his feet to notice it. He only said: "Perhaps so; but I would very much prefer my old ones to these, and wish they had taken something else as a souvenir."

The next morning the old fellow limped down stairs, and took a carriage for the depot carrying away with him probably a very unfavora-

It was then ascertained that a colored man named Wilkinson, who was one of the barbers at the Southern, had really taken Mr. Greeley's shoes as mementoes of the man who had worked so actively and earnestly for the freedom of the negroes. In speak-ing of the matter to Col. Todd, Witkhall near Mr. Greeley's room, and seeing the shoes standing outside the door, the idea struck him that they would be just the things to give to the children, to remind them of him who had done so much for the colored man. He therefore took them, hurried out of the hotel, and went to a shoe store, where he purchased a pair of much better shoes of the same size as the old ones, and returning to the hotel, put the former where the latter had stool. He thought that a fair exchange was no robbery, and felt that he was giving much more in actual value than he he was receiving. Wilkinson is dead, but the shoes are probably now in St. Louis. It is understood that several relie hunters are looking for them.

During the second year of the war a grocer in an Ohio town scaled his orices by reports from the front. One day a defeat would cut the price of butter four cents, the next day a vic-tory would raise the price of eggs a penny a dozen, and victory or defeat was certain to put even the jar of not-megs on the top shelf.
